THE GILLILAND QUESTION

A number of responses (although, curiously, nothing from Alexis himself) to the editorial discussion last time. Von Metzke says "I have two reactions: (1) You're Wrong; (2) You're right." Reinsel states that the problem has caused him sleepless nights without a real decision. Richard Shagrin argues, along with Don Miller, that the English F Denmark was destroyed but neither side moved in. I can't find ANY grounds for that. With Von Metzke's or my own viewpoint, we are interpreting the rules as we see them -- sort of reasoning between the lines and applying logic to what we see. However, the argument that the thing is destroyed (and one player suggested that the center then becomes a neutral again) is in the nature of a now rule, not an interpretation, and I can't accept it. Valid points can be made both for my ruling (which I see as the most logical -- naturally) and those on Gilliland's side (which I see as illogical but legal). So Conrad's correct -- I'm wrong and I'm right -- but, in a sense, he's incorrect. Like the proverbial baseball umpire, the Gamesmaster may make errors in judgment but he's always right.

One person did complain that I should have made it clear which way I would rule before the game began. This is patently ridiculous -- I could not be expected to foresee it, although now that it's come up I think you all know my ruling.

Another nice little problem comes up which has at its heart the same interpretational problems but in reverse:

ITALY: F TYRRHENIAN, F W. MED. TURKEY: F E. MED.
F TYRRHENIAN TO IONIAN F E. MED TO IONIAN
F W. MED (5) TURK. F E. MED TO IONIAN

Italy obviously made an error, but what happens. Does the Italian support for the Turkish move mean Turkey gets into the Ionian? Or is the Italian support an invalid order, cancelling out the move, and thus making it a 1-1 standoff? In real life the Turkish unit would make it, and there have been cases where, through mixups, such things have happened in warfare. But who wins? Does the rule stating that no unit may dislodge its own unit apply? I would have to rule that it does, that it's a standoff, since the Italian player is offering a support against the moves of another of his own units. I think they cancel themselves out. What do you think?

By the way -- on the Gilliland question many people asked what about if that were a 3rd power's unit in Denmark. It wasn't, so the analogy doesn't apply. But I'll discuss that point next time.

Jerry Jacks has moved again. Temporarily he's picking up his mail at the home of the present head of the Elves, Gnomes, & Little Men's Science Fiction Marching & Chowder Society: JERALD JACKS, % Felice Rolfe, 1360 Emerson, Palo Alto, California, 94301. See you next time.

Build directions above are obvious. Little happened except for the Turko-Austrian exchange program, and this remains the slowest of the BARAD-DUR games. Interestingly enough, Germany and England, both of whom have been surviving with 1 unit for a long while, still remain, while the principal players keep swapping centers. Moscow (Tass): Four shaggy beings believed to be spies of the northern pretender, Marc D'Dwings, have been captured in the ruins of Liverpool. The Supreme Soviet again stressed their support of their beloved ally, the rightful government of England, now in exile in the Soviet protectorate of Norway.

England to Gamesmaster: WHAT alliances?

Gamesmaster to England: The Anglo-French, of course.

BUILDS: RUSSIA was finally dislodged, no centers, RUSSIA IS OFF THE BOARD. Bye, Jim.

FRANCE loses Brest, gains nothing, REMOVE ONE.

TURKEY gains Trieste, loses a unit to elimination but no center losses, and so BUILDS TWO.

AUSTRIA Loses Trieste, Warsaw, and Berlin, and has no gains to show for it. REMOVE THREE.

ENGLAND gains Warsaw, Berlin, and Brest, and shows no losses, so it BUILDS THREE. In fact, England also gained Moscow, but it can not build 4, and we play this next year with 33 units.

DEADLINE FOR WINTER, 1906 BUILDS AND REMOVALS IS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1966, AT 9 PM EDT.

PROPAGANDA:

Vienna. Savor it while you can, Turkey -- the supply center you pick up this fall will be your last! As for the "fun" you said you were going to have getting your head bashed in by England, France, and Austria -- all we can say is that some folks have a weird way of having fun. What are you -- a masochist?

Constantinople: The small Black Sea garbage scow "Jascha Heifetz" today putted down the Bosphorus bearing survivors of the massacred 6th Army in Kiev. The army still remains on some maps in the Ministry of Military Fuddy-Duddiness, but its destruction is now definitely confirmed. Relatives of the slain have all received friendly, cheerful condolence cards signed "Uncle Sultan."

"Existentialism has one message for us! That it is not necessary to possess any understanding of life to live." -- from the Compressed Wisdom of Nug-Soth.

London, October 3, 1906: Sir Alfred Huffley, from a secret army base near Hangnail-on-the-Pinky, announced today that war with France was a necessity to English existence. With the fall of Belgium and the capture of Brest imminent the English would, to quote Sir Alfred, "have those fxxxxxg frogs in Paris hanging by the legs, necks, thumbs, and various portions genitalia by next Fall." When asked if England would ally with Turkey, Huffley answered, "not until they lift the Suez blockade."
